OLD AND MODERN OHIO ARCHITECTURE will be the subject of a series of illustrated lectures to be given at The Cleveland Museum of Art early this Spring by Nancy Coe, new member of the Museum staff. All of the slides to be used by Miss Coe were taken on her recent photographic excursions throughout the neighboring Ohio countryside. Emphasis will be placed on Western Reserve building types from 1830 to 1860 such as Federal, Greek Revival and Gothic Revival although outstanding examples of current styles will be included in the series.

A native Cleveland, Miss Coe was graduated from Hathaway Brown School and from Skidmore College. This Fall she received her M.A. in Fine Arts from Oberlin College. After an extensive tour of Europe in 1952-53, Miss Coe taught History of Art for two years at Saint Timothy's School in Stevenson, Maryland.

Beginning February 7th this class will meet from 3:00 to 5:00 p.m. for six Tuesdays.
